

ABOUT Sally Strackbein

Sally Strackbein inspires people to discover, clarify and express their value through speaking and storytelling. Her presentations, workshops, and coaching help her clients create and deliver messages that motivate, educate, or sell.

Sally is a professional member of the National Speakers Association.

Sally's background includes serving as Coordinator of Administrative Computing at Occidental College and other high tech positions. She discovered her knack for helping people become better marketers and presenters over 10 years ago when her husband, Ray, a professional speaker, asked for help with his presentations. That request led her to study marketing, presentation skills, and business storytelling. Now her clients as well as her husband benefit from her insights.

Sally and Ray have appeared on shows such as, NBC Nightly News, with Tom Browkaw, Fox News, NPR Marketplace, This is America with Dennis Wholey, and numerous other radio and television shows in the United States, France, Germany, Hungary, Australia and more.
